CAPE ANN—GLOUCESTER

POINTS AND FACTS OF INTEREST

Above—the mackerel schooner Grayling, outward bound. A fine type of the fishing schooner of a quarter of a century ago. She was a contestant in the Fisherman's 250th Anniversary race in August 1892.

Below—A "pinkey" or sharp sterned fishing craft used in the fisheries of a century ago. This photo was taken in 1890, in Gloucester harbor, the boat being 75 years old and in commission. They were accounted a very weatherly seaboat.

First white men, probably the Norseman, Thorwald, and his band of sea rovers, who sailing down the coast of Vinland (New England) came ashore on a "fair promontory" which made out into the sea in 1004. During the visit his band was attacked by the "Skrellings" (Indians) and Thorwald mortally wounded. By his wish he was buried on the land. In 1605 and in September 1606 Champlain visited this place, on the latter occasion rounding into Gloucester harbor and tarrying several days. He made a map of the place which he named Le Beauport. Like Thorwald he was ambushed and narrowly escaped death. The redoubtable John Smith came here in 1614 and named the Cape, Tragibigzanda after the princess who is reputed to have saved his life when he was captured by the Mahometans.

The three islands, Thachers, Salt and Milk islands were so named by him in commemoration of a feat in which he successively slew and beheaded three Turks. Gosnold in 1602 and Martin Pring in 1603 sailed by and probably landed on the cape. Named Cape Ann in honor of Princess Anne of Denmark, mother of Prince Charles. In 1623-1624 the place was settled by a colony sent out by Rev. John White of Dorchester, England and was incorporated in 1639 and named Gloucester by some settlers from the cathedral city by the Severn. Incorporated a city in 1873. Rockport on the northern side of the cape set off as a town in 1840. Famed for its granite quarries and rugged scenery. Sandy Bay breakwater (uncompleted) encloses one of the largest artificial harbors in the world, 1664 acres.

Stage Fort Park at westerly entrance of city. Site of settlement of Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1623-24. Tablet in commemoration of that fact placed on face of large boulder Conant, Half Moon and Stone beaches.

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Scene of "Wreck of the Hesperus." At Magnolia, Hesperus avenue. Fissure in solid rock cliff is 60 feet deep and 12 feet wide.

Mother Ann profile in Stone discovered in 1892 by Capt. William Thompson of Salem at tip end of Eastern point. Dog Bar breakwater a half mile long, completed in 1904, extends from this point. On Eastern Point are many of the show residences of the North Shore. "The Ram-parts" occupies site of Fort Independence. Fine residence of Col. John W. Prentiss recently completed.

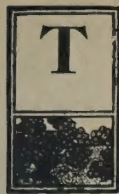

Ten Pound Island in outer harbor; government fish hatchery thereon. Used as sheep pasture in early days. Five Pound Island in inner harbor; both so named for amounts in colonial money originally sold for.

Thompson's mountain, or Mt. Anne, West Gloucester, highest elevation on the cape, 255 feet above sea level. Fine view ranging from Mt. Agamenticus on Maine coast to Wachusett Mountain, Bunker Hill Monument to Boston Bay. Tract given over as reservation in memory of Lawrence Minot; thickly wooded, favorite picnic resort; reached from New Way Lane. Nearby is Haskell's pond, from which city's water is secured.

Ravenwood Park, natural forest area extending from Fresh Water Cove to West Gloucester. Reached from

THE ROCKPORT SHORE

THE season is in its sere and yellow stage. Next week the festivities at Gloucester with its Pageantry and parade will attract a large number from this section with its picturesque exemplification of life of three centuries of America's oldest and most historic fishing port.

Rockport has had an average season. Perhaps the patronage here is less subject to fluctuations than elsewhere, a clientage which comes with assured regularity.

Robert Martin a party of six.

W. J. McKenna a party of four.

William Martin, a party of twelve.

B. B. Baker of the Oceanside, a party of four.

The Saturday evening dance at the Oceanside was a social event of more than ordinary note and was largely attended by the summer colony all along the North Shore.

A distinguished guest at the Oceanside is Senator Capper of Kansas, of national note, by reason of his unique and important position as the leader of the farm bloc. He is also the proprietor of a chain of a dozen farm papers in his section. Mrs. Capper, who accompaies him is a close friend of Mrs. Coolidge. They will remain over the anniversary for the Pagant and the Fisherman's race.

Old guests welcomed to the Oceanside for an August stay were Dr. Kenney seemed to express so well. "Coggeshall—Coggeshall"—where had I seen that name—an unusual one. My mind raced back and forth on the clue. Then I got it—a water color painting that hung on the dining room wall of a friend of mine in Boston. A beautiful bit of sea, rock and sky.

"You are Mr. Coggeshall the painter!" I exclaimed.

Therefore we fell upon him plying him with questions and the woman from Ohio whose brother was an artist asked at least five in one breath, all of which Mr. Coggeshall smilingly answered and then invited us to remain at will and eat our supper on the rocks. At his further invitation we inspected the long Camp building which contains 15 rooms, each facing the sea having its own door and a window front and back to insure ventilation. A large rectangular dining room where one eats looking out on the water much as from an ocean steamer, fills the center of the building. Mr. Coggeshall built this camp some time ago and each summer has seen it filled with a congenial group of people, some who painted and more who didn't, but all of them lovers of out-of-door life. At the end of the piazza we came into the studio—square, hospitable with sky lights, piano, broad fire place and sketches on the wall at which we exclaimed with delight as we entered.

Now I am passionately interested in creative art of all kinds especially that of the painter and when, as of late, in art as in all lines, honest work is a diminishing quantity, it was a joy indeed, to find in Mr. Coggeshall's beautiful studies the unusual combination of fine draughtmanship and color with the permeating spirit of nature. I say "spirit" because his water colors are finely spiritual and at the same time intelligible. They do not grope or gabble but say what is in the master's mind with splendid dignity and directness.

MY LADY GOES SHOPPING

Round and About the Town Goes The Clan in Quest of the Desirable

"Peggy dear," said Joan.

"Oh yes, Peggy dear," cried Marion.

"What do you children want?" Peggy's amused voice demanded.

Joan looked embarrassed. "Nothing," she answered hastily. "I—I," she raised a cute little silver (Schmidt) elephant and opened his accommodating back. "Have some bonbons?"

"Thank you, I will," said Peggy, gracefully." Now I do admire that silver elephant tremendously. If you were a Spaniard, or whatever it is that gives you anything at all that you openly admire, I'd be perfectly happy. However, since this is America, and since I have my solid silver little bird peppers from Schmidt's, and since I am contemplating making Phil think that he wants one of those lovely crystal vases of Schmidt's — you know those with the green crystal pendants and the wonderful shape—I shall content myself by taking only this bonbon."

"Noble cheeild," sang out Chubby. "Do take more than one—and pass them to me."

"Don't be so lev—There is no occasion for such levity," said Marion. "Peggy, you know Farr has the most wonderful bargains in sweaters! He is having a sale, you know, and you can buy the—the dreamiest sweaters for about half the original price! And the suede coats and hats—"

"She'll never be happy till she gets it," said Chubby, his irresistible (to Chubby) grin helped greatly by another caramel from Barker's. For one thin, Barker's soda fountain has put Chubby's famous smile on the map (his map, says Jimmy) for his grin is seen there from morning until night. (The rest of the clan uses poor Chubby as an excuse to go there You couldn't keep us away).

"Oh, and Peggy!" Joan put in. "Manahan is having the formal opening of model imported gowns and hats and wraps of all descriptions. You know you can't resist that!"

"Of course not, child," said Peggy calmly. "I don't intend to miss it. But what makes you so anxious to get me over to Lexington Avenue this morning? Del Monte's tea dances aren't until afternoon, if that's what's worrying you."

"Oh no, no, Peggy! It's not worrying us a bit. Oh no! Only, of course, we know how you love Slattery's, for instance, on a day like this. Those novelty cloth suits in stripes and plaids, georgeous, simply georgeous!" said Marion, with what she believed was a thoroughly disarming air.

"I should say so!" struck in Joan, eagerly. "Do you remember that evening gown Marion? Anne? The turquoise blue satin crepe with silver and crystal beading—and that dear scalloped hem with the band of fur—the corsage of roses?"

"Do I? I'll tell the cock-eyed world!" said Chubby, enthusiastically, "and oh, girls, that charman cloth dress for stout figures! That charming charman cloth dress! I couldn't keep my eyes off of it."

"He means that dress in the coat model," I giggled. "The lovely one with embroidery of French blue and silver. The square neck was so pretty. As soon as Mrs. Nuttall said that it was for a stout figure he asked questions enough—well, as many questions as everybody is asking about the pageant "Gloucester" now-a-days."

Joan and Marion favored me with scornful glances. Second childhood, they seemed to say. I wouldn't let them know that they had squelched me so I immediately engaged Jimmy in an earnest discussion of the irresponsibility of the older generation or some such serious question.

Meanwhile, Joan and Marion had returned to the attack.

Tea things for summer

THE THIRST that rises from the throat about four, appreciates good tea, a little sugar, and lemon, perhaps—but the thirst, that from the soul doth rise, demands that the potion be brewed in an Ovington teapot.

For only the worthiest china is included in the Ovington collection.

Whether you purchase a simple little tea-set, or equip your home with a fitting dinner service, you will find that the china will be soundly made and decorated in absolute accord with the dictates of good taste.

And, as usual, the prices of these tea-sets are unusually fair.

"Those evening dresses in Jonas'," sighed Marion. "Remember that new black one with the beading? That white one with that exquisite design in colored beading. Such graceful lines!"

Peggy weakened visibly. "White? Colored beading? Jonas?" she asked.

"Yes," said Joan.

"You bet," said Marion.

Peggy became strong again, however. "Oh girls, I must show you my after-dinner coffee set from Ovington's. It's ivory finish china, sterling silver mounted! The coffee pot, six cups and saucers the sugar and cream—oh it's adorable!"

"That one in Ovington's," said Joan sorrowfully. "Now I can't have it anyway."

"Not only that," said the triumphant Peggy, "but my 'nest of tables' as I call it! They had them in three finishes—black, blue, and red. Mine is the black enamel with Japanese characters. It's more than perfect. Three tables in one, just a dream with such a set as my coffee set."

"You lucky dog," said Marion.

There was silence for a moment. Then they returned to the attack.

"Have you seen my colored handkerchiefs from Grande Maison de Blanc? Too dear for words! French linens, monogramed, my dear! And oh boy! Those pleated bags in gray or tan with the green clasps!"

"Some of those beaded ones were very wonderful," said Joan gravely. "Such exquisite designs!"

"Haven't they!" agreed Peggy. "I just couldn't resist them the other day. I had to buy one or two."

"Ah—hum," said Chubby. "If at first you don't succeed,—chorus! Try, try again!"

"Do be still!" said Marion. "But truly, don't you feel just like shopping, Peggums?"

"Yes, I do; but I do wish that you girls would tell me just why you want to go this morning so very badly? I would like to know the reason. You know that I would sympathize," Peggy said.

Joan looked at Marion. Chubby looked at them both with a knowing expression. "I suggest that we go to McCutcheon's," he said. "Isn't Professor—ah—Wayne going to be there this morning?"

Marion pretended to be very unmoved. "Yes," she said, indifferently. "He is leaving this morning, you know, but he wishes to order some Christmas gifts—you know some of those exquisite linen handkerchiefs and things that McCutcheon has"

"Well, of all early birds," whistled Chubby. "Christmas! Say, why doesn't he order them for the anniversary? The man's crazy, or else he's trying to save daylight too fast, or —"

"Yes, yes, Chubby! That's allright. As it happens everybody is doing that very thing. They —" etc, etc.

We went to McCutcheon's

At McCutcheon's we met Professor Wayne. We looked at linen luncheon sets. So did he. We looked at Palestine point made by the American colony in Palestine, at Sicilian embroidery and filet, at the darker sets in French or Sardinian filet and cutwork at the Overland embroidered mosaic work. So did he.

Then we went to Cammeyer's So did he.

Peggy tried on some evening slippers, but he did balk at that. She looked at the tarnished gold cross-strap sandal, at a gold brocade, and at a black velvet with gold kid trimming and lost her heart to each in turn. Oh yes, and she did hesitate a long while over a silver with the two and three eight's French heel. Finally, she chose a pair of white satin ones with lace shirring and velvet filling—a true Cammeyer slipper, beautiful and appropriate.

"Well," said Peggy, regretfully, "I really suppose that we must be going. You are leaving soon, aren't you, Mark?"

By the way, Joan and Marion had propitiated Peggy with sodas and sun-daes and—well, in short, with Trowbridge and Finnegan's until she had

THE HIGHLAND MAN'S TOAST

BY ARCHIE MORRISEN

Gloucester's Blacksmith Poet

Scotland, the land of the thistle and heather,
Scotland, the land of the mountains and flood,
Scotland, the birthplace of true hearted heroes,
Who paid for their freedom their last drop of blood,
Well may each Scotchman while life lasts remember
The brave ones who fell against numberless hosts,
Who tried to enslave her, and in slavery degrade her,
And whose names shall forever be the Highland man's toast.

Brave is the name of our own hero, Wallace
Whose brave heart to Scotland was loyal and true,
Who lived for his glory and died that dishonor
Might never descend on the jacket of blue,
And the Bruce we still mourn, at famed Bannockburn
With his brave little band, the usurpers defied,
Who fought like a lion, vast armies defying,
Till the field with the blood of our foeman was dyed.

CHORUS

Here's to the Heath, the Hills and the Heather, Here's to the Bonnet, the Kilt and the Feather.
Here's to the heroes that Scotland can boast,
May their names never die, that's a Highland man's toast.

Wave on stern thistle, wave on bonny heather,
Grow over the graves where our darling ones lie.
Bloom there to show them how our friends and our foemen,
How Scotchmen can fight and how Scotchmen can die.
Bid them remember we need no defender
Our hearts are as true as the brave ones of yore,
Whose names we still cherish, till memory perish
So let the toast resound from the hills to the shore.

Gloucester, 1923.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON TO COME

Also Senators, East and West and Notables
Generally to the Fisherman's
Pageant and Anniversary
Race

The Gloucester Tercentenary Celebration is attracting international attention. Sir Thomas Lipton arrived in New York from Europe Monday for the express purpose of witnessing the Fisherman's Anniversary race and the Fisherman's Tercentennial Anniversary Pageant "Gloucester".

The editor of "The Shore", with the late Fred W. Tibbets were the two men instrumental in interesting Sir Thomas in this matter, he contributing the fine Lipton cup illustrated in our first issue.

Another man of national importance who is greatly interested in these two events is Senator Arthur E. Capper of Kansas, the dominating figure in the Farm bloc. He, with Mrs. Capper, are guests at the Oceanside and are more than delighted with their first visit to Gloucester and the North Shore Senators Lodge and Walsh, Gov. Cox and a score of other notables, have signified their intention of being present at these festivities.

Inquiry has been made regarding parking space. Patrons of the Pageant are assured ample parking space on the area adjacent to the Pageant amphitheatre.

The first presentation of the Pageant will be on Tuesday night, August 28th (day of the grand parade) and the second presentation, Thursday night, Aug. 30th at 8.30.

Take the Manchester-Magnolia road thence to the Park, returning via the New Essex highway to all parts of the county, an ideal one-way route.

FICTION RAMPANT DOWN IN GLOUCESTER

Boston Herald

As I was cleaning the attic the other day I came across an old diary of mine. "A Manuscript of Youth", which brought to me an "Echo" of the past.

I am glad that "Tomorrow About This Time" I am to meet my old friend, "Stella Dallas." Although she lived "West of the Water-Tower," she was at our house a great deal when we were growing up. The "Family" always considered her "One of Ours." She was "A Daughter of the Dawn," and not of "Dusk and Moonrise."

"The Faint Perfume" of "The Enchanted April" of that year comes to me as I read over the pages, and I must ask her if she remembers "The Fascinating Stranger" who came to our "Village" and made such a sensation among "The Girls" and who proved to be "Capt Blood." I am sure "Cordelia the Magnificent" was "The Woman He Desired." In those days, only to hear his "Step on the Stair" "Within These Walls" was a delight.

I wonder if she recalls the night we wandered down "The Mystery Road" to see "Miss Minerva of the Old Plantation" and get "The Vegetables" she had promised us. We had only "The Dim Lantern" to see by, and had to grope along "The Dark Places." We certainly were in "Danger" as we strolled in "The Middle of the Road," when the "Black Oxen" broke away from "The Stumbling Herd."

He afterward became a "Wandered in the Wasteland," that place of "Desolate Splendor." "His Vision of Desire" was always "Where the Blue Begins." Now "His Children's Children" figure in "Many Marriages" and they care not about "Being Respectable." They like to taste the "Stolen Honey" and take part in "The Dance of Life."

WOODLAND ROADS ENDANGERED

No feature of the North Shore is more admired by the residents than the twenty-eight miles of private wood roads that wind among the forests and along the coast. They are the direct result of plans laid forty years ago by gentlemen who had either the imagination or the foresight to see the time coming when the main highways would be unsafe for private riding. Since the first road was laid, others have followed in quick succession, all of them constructed and maintained by private subscription of the North Shore residents, and constructed, moreover, for the private use of those residents.

The main highways along the shore are crowded now, as it was well foreseen. Lines of cars that rival the city traffic pass daily. And under such conditions these roads have proved a godsend. For upon them automobiles are prohibited, leaving them absolutely safe for horseback riding or driving. The children of the residents have thus had an unmolested place, untouched by crowded dangerous traffic.

Until very recently the rights of passage over these ways has been generally respected and the signs which were posted telling that auto traffic is forbidden have been very well heeded. But now, with the hordes of autoists and irresponsible drivers which throng the highways, these wooded havens have been invaded and made absolutely dangerous and useless for the purposes for which they were intended.

Furthermore, these trespassers are at times insolent in the extreme and refuse to recognize the right of anyone to prevent them from using the drives, so carefully planned, so cheerfully supported and so earnestly desired by the residents. Right thinking people will at once recognize the harm they are causing in this act of trespass for it means much to the shore as one of the most valuable assets.

The roads are now to be policed, and motorists using them warned. It is confidently believed that it is mainly through inadvertence that they are being used for a purpose other than that for which they were built, but aggressive trespass cases will be reported to the highway authorities, which may mean a revocation of licenses. But there is no excuse for the trespassing, for the roads are guarded by well marked signs. The mayor of Beverly and the chief of police of Manchester are awake to the danger and are cordially co-operating with the North Shore residents.

ANNISQUAM YACHTING

A Wet Sheet and a Sea that Followed Fast make Rattling Race Conditions Saturday. Sandpiper Wins

A rattling southwest breeze gave the heavy weather boats their chance at Annisquam Saturday afternoon. All carried full sail, although had some reefed the result might have been different.

In the Bird class, the Sandpiper was away with the gun, Albatross and Tern following in order. The course was a broad reach to the inner mark a reach across to Essex and a heat home. The Sandpiper was never headed, winning by 25 seconds.

It was the Nisans day in the 15-foot class and ex-Commodore Woodbury sailed a winner. Commodore Wiggin showed the way to the inner mark and to Essex.

Once on the end on work the Nisan demonstrated that these conditions were her long suit for she began to eat to weather windward and foot in impressive fashion soon stringing into the lead with Morrill Wiggin in the Hurrah second boat.

Catspaw got the best of the getaway in the Cat class with the Puss-in-Boots and Copycat following in order, the field being left badly. These positions were held to Plum Cove. On the windward work this order was changed, Copycat going into first place with the Kittiwake and Sea Mew

SUNDAY'S RACE

Another Heavy Weather Test.
Russell Smith Again a Winner. Miss Janet Hubbard also adds to Her Laurels as a Sailor

Sunday's race was sailed in a stiff southeast breeze with a sloppy sea, although the wind was not quite as strong as the day previous. Three of the classes came to the line for the starting gun.

In the Birds it was a battle royal all over the course between the Sandpiper and Tern scarcely two boats lengths separating the craft until the beacon was reached coming into the river.

Jack Hooper, thinking to get a little stronger breeze, kept under the Squam shore, but lost out as the bluff screened the wind, while the Sandpiper, more in the open, was better favored, consequently hauled away more rapidly up the river.

The Sandpiper got the best of the sendoff with the Jay, which made her first appearance for the season, second boat. The course was to the inner mark thence to Essex and then back home, a run, reach and a beat. Before the inner mark was reached, Tern had overhauled and passed

Jay but try as her skipper would, could not pass the Sandpiper and the old adage of the stern chase was verified.

The Cat class got away fairly on even terms, but when open water was reached after passing out of the river, the Hurrah had established a slight lead, hard pressed by Copycat. This was another nip and tuck struggle with Morrill Wiggin always holding the upper hand.

Miss Janet Hubbard is rapidly winning quite a reputation as a heavy weather sailor, this being her second win in the Fish class in rough weather. She landed first place by a good margin. The summary:

confessed to them that Mark was a very dear friend of her father's, and that she had known him from childhood. She had always adored him, and he had been the very dearest of friends up to her marriage. She had not seen him since. That satisfied them for awhile. Then Joan made a proposition. "Professor Wayne says that he has time to make that long-deferred trip to Frank E. Davis's that he has promised us to take. What do you say to making one last farewell to all of our dear old stores—for instance, Chubby can go and chat with our Same Old Bill, while we buy him out! He has given us the best service—"

"And the best food—" said Chubby.

"That ever was, Joan finished.

"Let's go!" said Marion.

Peggy, however, said her farewells to Mark Wayne there, because an engagement at the Oceanside which she didn't wish to break prevented her going.

We went. From Gorton-Pew's to the Safe Deposit and Trust, from Stickney, Jacobson and Goodman's to McPherson and Symmes, our famous old standby, and from all corners of the town to Wetherell's! And then we came home to Peggy.

"Oh Peggy dear!" said Marion. "We had the best time at the North Shore Furniture Company! We looked at everything.

"And bought almost as much," I growled.

"Yes, and at the Gloucester National Bank—oh Marion," Joan sighed. "Will you ever forget his face there? I saw it from the side, you know, and he did look so—"

"Romantic," suggested Chubby.

"He looked more romantic," Chubby added,

"Did you go to Tompkins'?" Peggy asked. "I want one of those old hickory chairs."

"Yes, they went," Chubby responded brightly. "And then in the National Furnishing Company, he bent lowly over Joan's hand, also over Marion's, and said farewell in the most touching manner to all. He didn't bend down over my hand though," Chubby pretended to weep.

Joan and Marion gave Chubby a few indignant looks, and turned to Peggy, to discover that worthy young lady all but hysterical.

"Oh Joan! Did he say that all his life he would remember this summer as one of the pleasantest of his life? Did he tell you that the very dearest of his memories would be associated with you, always? Did he? Peggy demanded.

"Why, yes," said Joan slowly, "Those are almost his exact words."

"B-but, Joan!" stammered Marion. "That's exactly what he said to me!"

"Just a moment, children," Peggy advised. "Did he call you 'dear little girl'?"

"Y-yes," they admitted.

Peggy was silent.

"Well?" demanded Joan, "Why don't you say something?"

Peggy threw out her hands. "It speaks for itself, my dears. Mark Wayne is the most notorious and beloved flirt that ever was. He has left more girls like you, Joan, like Marion, and like me with that holy feeling of sentimentality than could be counted. You know, it's like the touching scene in the play that Newland Archer watched in the "Age of Innocence." The faded rose, and all that sort of thing—"

"Oh don't," wailed Marion. "The mean old thing. I hate him. I don't care. I was only flirting myself."

"Well," said Chubby, "Let's all be sensible girls. Marion has found out how it feels to be flirted with. Joan's black eyes are snapping, and everything's fine. How about a little bite to eat? And besides there's the pageant next week!"

"Chubby's two loves!" Peggy laughed. A bite to eat and the pageant! Well, Joan, Marion is all well along Cape Ann?"

"Shore!" they chorused.

try life. H. A. Vincent has two of his good things in the show which are attracting much attention.

There are not many marines shown, the largest is by G. T. Margeson, The Gull Rocks, with heavy dashing surf. Harrison Cady's water color of the Landing, is brilliant in color and interesting in composition.

Parker Perkins shows a small gray marine, truthful in its rendering, but a subject that cannot be made forcible on a small canvas. Two other small marines are by John Rummell.

The G. A. R. man, by Marguerite S. Pearson is a good figure picture and attracts much attention. Other exhibitors who show some of their brush work are Grace A. Barron, Bertha S. Shepherd, Fred A. Gleason, Agnes Abbott, Marguerite C. Munson, Hortense Bodell, Joseph Birren, Arthur Beaumont, H. B. Dummer, Harry Farlow, Alfred Churchill, Katherine M. Benson, John M. Buckley, Kathryn E. Cherry, S. E. Armour, Yarnell Abbott.

SUNNEDON-BY-THE-SEA

A lingering hour we spent in this manner and then we accompanied Mr. Coggeshall to the little gallery on Langsford Street at the entrance to "Sunnedon" where we enjoyed more of his pictures and were increasingly impressed with the man and his work. Fronting the door as we entered hung a large canvas entitled "The Salt Ship" picturing a feature of the life of Gloucester which passed into history with the great war;—that is, the once frequent sight of an Italian Barque at anchor in the harbor surrounded by a swarm of schooners waiting to unload her cargo of salt of which large amounts are used in the city's industry. Gloucester itself is seen in the background and a cool shifting sky lifts above the colorful marine group. A thing of beauty indeed and one of special significance in that it preserves picturesque tradition.

There were studies of New England hillsides in autumn, of spring apple blossoms, the rocks and cedars of Dogtown; A water color showing a white barque in limped Venetian waters surrounded by the sunny colored sails of small boats like a great white moth in a cluster of orange butterflies; work in Morocco, an especially alluring sketch of the Kasba Gate, the door to the secretive mysterious heart of old Tangier. Certainly a great variety of subject matter showing the broad outlook and sympathy of the artist and the long years of training that had gone into its creation.

As a mere boy, Mr. Coggeshall served an apprenticeship as an engraver on wood and at that time conceived a great love for marine subjects. Spending his entire lunch hours in sketching on the wharves he saw the passing of the marine glory of Boston and his early sketches are full of the lost majesty of ships.

The afternoon waned, we had forgotten time, forgotten even our lunch as we looked and listened in deepest interest. A golden light stole through the emerald shadow of the woods flooding the gallery with beauty.

"Sunset, that is something you should not miss," said Mr. Coggeshall. "This is the time to enjoy your lunch on the rocks and I will have hot coffee sent down to you."

Of course we were delighted at this prospect and once more retraced our steps through the woods to the point of rocks. A wide winged sunset flamed above the bay and was again reflected in its heaving peace. Rose and purple and gold it flung its banner far above our heads to the zenith. In a magic world we opened our lunch at last and each morsel seemed nectar and ambrosia to our taste. We insisted that Mr. Coggeshall share it with us and were rewarded with some interesting stories of Dogtown and early Gloucester days.

Afterwards with everything repacked and the sunset faded to pale violet we reluctantly said good night vowing to return before Mr. Coggeshall started west, where, during the Autumn he has a large assignment of work in Indiana.

A soft sea twilight was falling as we drove toward the highway. The woman from Ohio heaved a ponderous sigh. "And to think that this noon I was bored to distraction."

I looked through the dim tunnel of trees to the bay now faint with dusk. "Good night," I said, "Sunnedon-by-the-Sea."

PARKING AT THE PAGEANT

Ample parking facilities at a moderate charge will be afforded all patrons of the Pageant, next to pageant enclosure, moderate charge.

The city authorities are in consultation with the state highway commission relative to the advisability of making the Manchester-Magnolia-Gloucester road one way to Gloucester, with Essex avenue leading to all parts of the upper section of the county, the out-going route.

Recollections of your visit to... The Dahlia Gardens will be recalled as one of the pleasures of your vacation spent on the beautiful North Shore. In the gardens may be seen thousands of the finest blooms of every hue and color.

May be perhaps, you may wish to select DAHLIAS to match some particular color scheme in your home garden, if so I can supply you at reasonable prices.
